

The Lake District and Haiti

The Lake District is in the North West of England, and comprises some of the most beautiful natural scenery that we have.

Much of the beauty of the Lake District, as its name suggests, is found in its vast mountains with lakes which have formed in the base of them, such as the famous Ullswater and Windermere.

Haiti is a country in the Caribbean, south of the Gulf of Mexico in South America. Its beaches and tropical climate make it a country rich in its own natural beauty. The seas there are a aquamarine in colour and the skies clear and bright blue for most of the year, with the cool sea breeze ensuring an ideal summer climate for its residents.

Wordsworth didn't visit Haiti, but later we will see that he had certainly heard about it.